Prose fiction is an imaginary story, usually written down, that someone tells in everyday, natural language. The opposite of nonfiction and poetry, it lets people leave reality, exploring characters and events that typically are limited only by the scope of the writer's imagination. It generally uses a variety of techniques such as narrative and has a wide range in terms of length.

(Although I prefer only one space after a period, two spaces after a period are suggested by the sixth-edition APA manual at the top of page 88.) This document has a history that compels me to give credit where it's due. Many years ago I downloaded a fifth-edition template from an unspecified author's web site at Northcentral University.

Other colours are a surprise! Also, I am not American, so I call "periods" full stops and I spell words the right way. I've tried to avoid discussing things Americans and other people disagree on in this guide (and specifically mention it when it does come up), but one or two little things may have crept in, for which I apologise (with an "s") in advance.
