Plot. Through first-person narration, the reader is immersed at the start of the story in the drab life that people live on North Richmond Street, which seems to be illuminated only by the verve and imagination of the children who, despite the growing darkness that comes during the winter months, insist on playing "until [their] bodies glowed."

Araby (short story) - Wikipedia

The challenge for the short story writer lies in developing the major elements of fiction—character, plot, theme, point of view, etc.—in less than 25 typeset pages, as the industry cutoff for the form is considered 7,500 to 10,000 words. To meet this challenge, short-story writers generally follow, consciously or unconsciously, standardized "guidelines" for success.
